

The Artist Zuz & Sriracha House give their guests a chance to own an original piece from Art Basel

It's that time of year again when artists and their artwork come to town to see and be seen. This year, Sriracha House - recently named "one of the top new Miami restaurants of 2014" - is making artwork more accessible to its guests by offering them a chance to win an original drawing created by The Artist Zuz.

The Artist Zuz will be unveiling her latest work at a special evening reception, brought to you by Sriracha House during Art Basel. Zuz works in a similar way as the restaurant's master chefs: she mixes color and shapes in a fresh and contemporary way and works intuitively in the style of action painting. Even though she is currently based in New York, she has been a resident of South Beach Miami in the past and understands the flavor of the city.

Her silk sculptures are the first of its kind and show a kinship with the style of the food at the restaurant; it's not Chinese. It's not Japanese. It's not Vietnamese....and neither is her work. Its fluid shapes and calligraphy-like lines have a certain asian influence in the dynamics of the artwork yet the style is completely unique.

Sriracha House and the Artist Zuz are extending an invitation to food and art lovers to join them at the unveiling of this work on December 5th, 2014 from 5pm until 8pm. Complimentary beer and hors d'oeuvre will be served and perhaps you will be the one who walks away with an original artwork to commemorate the night!
